- Workforce housing board workshop.docx

Once a month, CCUSD holds a board workshop, in which a special single topic is explored in depth. These workshops are less formal than the bi-weekly board meetings, and the public is invited to have an open discussion with the board during these sessions. A CCUSD School Board workshop held this past Tuesday evening on workforce housing. The focus was on how Culver City can provide more affordable housing for people employed by CCUSD. It was well attended by Culver City residents, CCUSD staff and three members of the Culver City Council, including Mayor Meghan Sahli-Wells. Data was presented based on a survey of 360 CCUSD staff (including teachers, administrators and classified staff). The data indicated that 78% of the staff who filled out the survey live outside of Culver City. 28% commute to their campus more than 10 miles, with just under 50% of those surveyed spending more than 30 minutes commuting each way – in some cases more than 60 minutes. An organization called Landed, that supports educational staff on the path toward home ownership, presented to the large crowd. The board decided to discuss this issue at a future meeting and will present language that will go into a resolution regarding the district's interest in supporting staff housing on campus property. The details of the direction the district will take and the requested partnership from the city in pursuing that direction will be discussed and voted on publicly.
